NICARAGUA BLASTS CIA
STEVEN DONZIGER

The Nicaraguan government charged Monday the CIA plans to bring together anti-Sandinista rebel leaders within the next few weeks in an effort to unite their forces and establish a government-in-exile.

In Honduras, Radio 15 de Septiembre, the official voice of the anti-Sandinista Nicaraguan Democratic Force, said its fighters plan to adopt urban guerrilla tactics.

"We will move toward direct action with attacks and sabotage in Managua, without neglecting the military actions in the north of Nicaragua," said Enrique Bermudez, FDN military chief.

In El Salvador, presidential spokesman Julio Adolfo Reyes Prendes said the government planned to release "a detailed report" on the assassination Sunday of chief government corruption investigator Pedro Rene Yanez.

Authorities said Yanez and four passers-by were gunned down by a follower of the ultra-rightist ARENA party in Concepcion de Oriente, 108 miles east of San Salvador in La Union province.

Nicaraguan Interior Minister Tomas Borge, in an interview published in the official newspaper Barricada, charged that within the next few weeks, "the mercenary heads of the CIA, (Adolfo) Calero, (Eden) Pastora and (Alfonso) Robelo will meet to establish a larger alliance and form one organic organization."

In Washington, a State Department spokesman declined comment, citing a policy of "refusing to confirm or deny alleged covert activities" abroad.

Borge, known as a hardliner within the ruling leftist Sandinista Front, said the CIA also plans to assassinate several Nicaraguan leaders, including himself and state security chief Lenin Cerna.

"They have planned for the coming months a large counterrevolutionary offensive (that will include) attacks on some cities," Borge said. "They are again planning to establish a provisional government-in-exile and if possible, in national (Nicaraguan) territory."

The Nicaraguan government has repeatedly charged the CIA with trying to unite the rebel groups.

The effort has reportedly failed because Pastora, head of the Costa-Rican based Democratic Revolutionary Alliance known as ARDE, has refused to associate with the former national guardsmen of dictator Anastasio Somoza in the FDN.

The FDN, based in Honduras, is headed by Calero and reportedly has a force of 10,000 fighters. Robelo recently split from Pastora's ARDE, saying he would give up the armed fight against the Sandinistas to battle on the political front.

Borge said the CIA has demanded the rebel groups unite as a condition for continued American support. Congress cut off funding for the guerrillas last October but plans to reconsider this spring.

Before the cut-off, the Reagan administration funneled some $100 million to the rebels during four years. The Sandinistas charge, however, the Americans are continuing to secretly finance the rebels.
